Alan,

You are asking me to be reasonable??? Were your clients reasonable to me in any way, shape or form as they tortured me daily over a 2 year period right out of my own studio in the LA arts district with their illegal use of the AIR next to me? You ask me to be reasonable when your pathetic clients are continuing to try and disrupt my life a year after I left the Arts District? You ask me to be reasonable when you are trying to sue me for $100,000.00 for writing the truth about what your asshole clients put me through? The time for being reasonable is over and far in the past! Considering what your clients have put me through as well as the comment below from your ignorant and obviously frustrated colleague Tommy, the price per domain is solid. Thanks for that Big T ! By the way, I hate sleazy lawyers as much as I hate douche bag wiener boys. But I guess sleazy is the prerequisite for the job, right Tommy? Got anything else to say? Because your just a prostitute that wears a tie as far as I'm concerned, so blow me!

You know the price. Let's not play stupid! WurstkucheSucks.com's sale price is the same amount your clients wanted to try and extort from me in your bullshit law suit. As I said, you set the price per domain yourselves in that frivolous suit. And Tommy's little comment below has locked that price in tight for you. By the way, WurstkucheSucks.com is no longer alone. There are now two Wurst Kuche domains I've registered. WurstkucheBlogs.com was registered on the 11th, after the deadline I gave you. So it is not part of the deal I offered. But you can buy that one too. It's the same price as the first one. FYI, my first "socio-pathological" letter to you was the first posting on WurstkucheBlogs.com, with all my past and new blogs to follow.

I have also registered LAArtsDistrictBlogs.com where I also plan to post my blogs. That domain is NOT for sale. But the blogs I plan to post there about Wurstkuche and your wonderful clients are negotiable.

I suggest if your clients are serious, you act fast before I register a few more Wurstkuche domains and raise the price per domain. Again, the price per domain is the same amount that your clients wanted to try to extort from me in your bullshit law suit. You and your clients set that price and my father always said that "turn about is fair play". And he didn't like lawyers much either.
